Protect yourself and others

How does coronavirus spread?

The virus doesn't spread itself – humans spread it. It's spread via tiny droplets from a person's lungs. It can pass to other people through the air, or from surfaces.

How can I protect myself and other people?

Unfortunately, any close contact between people risks spreading it. Therefore everyone must follow the social distancing guidelines and stay at home. You must:

- Only go outside for food, health reasons or work (but only if you can't work from home)
- Only take one form of outdoor exercise a day, for example a run, walk or cycle alone or with members of your household
- Stay 2 metres (6 feet) away from other people at all times if you go out
- Wash your hands as soon as you get home

You cannot meet up with others, even friends or family.

If you have symptoms that may be coronavirus, do not leave your home for 7 days. If you are in a household with someone else who has symptoms, do not leave your home for 14 days if you remain symptom free. If you start to display symptoms during those 14 days, you must not leave your home for 7 days from the date the symptoms began. Household isolation will help us all control the spread of the virus to family, friends, the wider community and the most vulnerable.

For the latest guidance visit www.nhsinform.scot/coronavirus. If you can't get online, you can also phone 0800 028 2816 (8am–10pm).

Additional help and advice

When should I call 111 or 999?

You can call NHS 24 on 111 if you have symptoms of coronavirus which worsen or do not improve after seven days. For a life-threatening emergency, call 999 and say you have coronavirus symptoms.

If you or anyone in your household has an immediate health concern, it's important that you still seek urgent medical help from your GP practice, or call 111 for out of hours support. Call 999 for an emergency.

What if I received a letter from the NHS saying I am at higher risk of severe illness?

You need to isolate at home for 12 weeks to protect yourself. Please follow the shielding guidance in your letter and sign up to the text service for support during this time.

Your local authority has a dedicated helpline to arrange delivery of food and medicines, and signpost to other support services. Find contact details at www.gov.scot/covid-shielding-contacts

I'm 70 or over, 28 weeks pregnant or over, or receive the flu jab annually for medical reasons.

If you are in one of these groups you have an increased risk of severe illness from coronavirus and should strictly follow social distancing measures. You must only go out for food, health reasons, exercise or work (but only if you can't work from home).

If you are older and looking for information, advice and friendship, phone the Age Scotland free helpline on 0800 12 44 222 (Mon–Fri, 9am–5pm). Family and friends may also call if they are concerned about an older person.

Support

How can I look after myself?

If you're feeling anxious, frustrated or overwhelmed, you're not alone in that.

Here are some simple ways to help yourself feel better:

- Phone a friend for a chat
- Do an activity that takes your mind off the news for a while
- Get some exercise (you can go outside once a day*, but remember to keep 2 metres away from others at all times)
- NHS Inform offer advice and a range of online tools to help deal with stress, anxiety and depression on www.nhsinform.scot

There's a list of organisations that can offer additional support at the back of this leaflet and on www.readyscotland.org

How can I look after other people?

By staying home, you are protecting others and the NHS. However, if you are fit and well you can still help others. Whether it's practical or emotional support, there are lots of ways you can volunteer to help. For the latest information on how to help safely, and to sign up to volunteer visit www.readyscotland.org

*Unless you have received a letter from NHS Scotland advising you not to leave your home or are self-isolating due to personal or household symptoms.
