No-Fault Compensation for injury resulting from medical treatment: Consultation Questions

1. The research team supporting the review reported (Farrell et al, 2010\textsuperscript{19}) that previous research suggests that when an error has occurred, patients expect doctors to make a meaningful apology, provide an explanation and take steps to prevent the error from recurring. The findings of their research would appear to support the contention that for many, if not most, patients this is the primary aim, rather than a financial award.

2. The Scottish Public Services Ombudsman (SPSO) has published advice in relation to apology\textsuperscript{20}. This advice was referenced in the guidance issued to NHSScotland in March 2012 on the handling and learning from feedback, comments, concerns and complaints.

Question 1: What, if any, steps do you feel are necessary or appropriate to ensure that when an error has occurred, patients receive a meaningful apology?

NHS bodies should wherever possible, offer to patients or relatives, an unreserved apology for mistakes or errors by staff or systems; or if the circumstances do not justify such a line, a statement to the effect that it is regretted that the treatment provided, did not meet the high standard that you expected of the NHS, etc.

Appropriate training and post-graduate training at medical/nursing schools could support this.

3. The Review Group considered that the following were essential criteria for a compensation scheme for injuries resulting from medical treatment:

- The scheme provides an appropriate level of compensation to the patient, their family or carers
- The scheme is compatible with the European Convention on Human Rights
- The scheme is easy to access and use, without unnecessary barriers, for example created by cost or the difficulty of getting advice or support
- People are able to get the relevant specialist advice in using the scheme;
- Decisions about compensation are timely
- People who have used the scheme feel that they have been treated equitably
- The scheme is affordable
- The scheme makes proportionate use of time and resources
- The scheme has an appropriate balance between costs of administration (e.g. financial or time) and the level of compensation awarded

\textsuperscript{19} http://www.scotland.gov.uk/Topics/Health/NHS-Scotland/No-faultCompensation/Volume-II-report
Decisions about compensation are made through a robust and independent process
The scheme has an independent appeal system
The scheme treats staff and patients fairly/equitably
A reasonable time limit is set for compensation claims.

Question 2. Do you agree that the principles and criteria set out above are essential in a compensation system?

Yes ☑️  No ☐

2.1 Are there any to which you would attach particular priority or importance? Are there any others you would add?

The first point will support the public’s perception of the success of the scheme, otherwise they will choose to ignore it. Other important criteria are timeliness, equity and fairness. There also perhaps needs to be more consideration of the complexity of demonstrating causation in the present system.

4. The Review Group identified a number of issues it believed were relevant to the likely success of any system and agreed that the following criteria were desirable, and considered and highlighted the importance of the wider issues detailed below:

Desirable
- The public in general trusts the scheme to deliver a fair outcome
- The scheme does not prevent patients from seeking other forms of non-financial redress, including through the NHS Complaints system
- The scheme encourages transparency in clinical decision-making
- The scheme contributes to rehabilitation and recovery.

Question 3: Do you agree that these criteria are desirable in a compensation system?

Yes ☑️  No ☐

3.1 Are there any others you think are desirable and should be included?

The scheme should be manageable and administratively straightforward.

Wider issues
- The scheme contributes to:
  - organisational, local and national learning
  - patient safety
  - quality improvement
- Lessons learned can be used to influence organisational risk management in the future
- The scheme encourages and supports safe disclosure of adverse events
The scheme does not put barriers in place for referral to regulators of any cases which raise grounds for concern about professional misconduct or fitness to practise.

Question 4: Do you have views or ideas on how a compensation scheme could more effectively contribute to the wider issues identified above?

If there was an effective database in place, which staff could use to interrogate the results.

5. When considered the Review Group’s suggested essential principles and criteria against other schemes and the Swedish model came out on top. Based on this the Review Group offered:

Recommendation 1 - that consideration be given to the establishment of a no-fault scheme for medical injury, along the lines of the Swedish model, bearing in mind that no-fault schemes work best in tandem with adequate social welfare provision.

Question 5: Based on the background information on the system in operation in Sweden given in Annex A would you support the approach suggested in Recommendation 1?

Yes ☐ No ☑

If not, why not and what alternative system would you suggest?

As presently described, the three Medical Defence Organisations have declined to provide data to Scottish Government regarding the number and value of settlements against primary care contractors. As the Scheme would be an NHS one, it is essential that primary care contractors be included – it is unworkable in practice to have two schemes working in parallel – one – no fault, and the other, litigation only. Many current claims involve both hospitals and primary care contractors.

Recommendation 2 - that eligibility for compensation should not be based on the ‘avoidability’ test as used in Sweden, but rather on a clear description of which injuries are not eligible for compensation under the no-fault scheme.

Question 6: Would you support the approach in Recommendation 2? This would mean for example that where treatment carries a known risk and the patient has given consent to that treatment it would not be eligible.

Yes ☑ No ☐
If yes, what other injuries would you consider should not be eligible?

Medical science is in a state of flux or development, and therefore it is really impossible to define those injuries which should not be eligible. While we would be reluctant to recommend proceeding on principle, this may be the only appropriate mechanism. However, thought might need to be given to the patient’s contribution to the injury or requirement for treatment and to those injuries that are not ‘severe’ and/or ‘long lasting’ – thresholds would need to be defined.

6. The Review Group was of the view that any recommended changes to a no-fault system should cover all healthcare professionals including those not directly employed by the National Health Service. The group believed that fairness dictated that all patients whether treated by the NHS or privately should have access to an improved system if possible. If this proved impossible, the group nonetheless believed that there were benefits that could be obtained by a move to no-fault for NHS patients. The group’s preference was that all patients should be covered by the no-fault scheme and offered:

Recommendation 3 - that the no-fault scheme should cover all medical treatment injuries that occur in Scotland; (injuries can be caused, for example, by the treatment itself or by a failure to treat, as well as by faulty equipment, in which case there may be third party liability)

Recommendation 4 - that the scheme should extend to all registered healthcare professionals in Scotland, and not simply to those employed by NHSScotland.

(As explained in the Cabinet Secretary’s foreword we acknowledge that further work is needed to help in our understanding of the volume, level and cost of compensation claims handled by the Medical Defence Unions and private healthcare providers. We will seek to explore this further with the relevant stakeholders during the consultation period.)

Question 7: Do you support the view that, if introduced, a no-fault scheme should cover all clinical treatment injuries (e.g. private healthcare and independent contractors) and all registered healthcare professionals and not just those directly employed by NHSScotland?

Yes ☐ No ☑

If not, why not?

The scheme should cover all care which is funded by the state – whether provided by NHS or by private contractors but should exclude private care. The reason is that the no-fault works where there is already some provision for the consequences of care going wrong but that it would be unreasonable for the state to have to bear much of the cost of treatment which was entirely a private transaction. For example, if someone has “unnecessary” cosmetic surgery and it goes wrong then they should be able to gain punitive damages from the surgeon. This would ensure that the surgeon gained adequate insurance and made careful consideration before taking on the patient.

7.1 What, if any, difficulties do you foresee in including independent contractors (such as GPs, dentist etc) and private practice?

None, as long as it is clear when an independent contractor is acting on behalf of the public sector.

7.2 What are your views on how a scheme could be designed to address these issues?

The scheme needs to be clear about where the provision of care is part of the NHS and therefore recompense could be sought and where the provision of services by an external commercial company should be liable not the public purse.

Question 8: The intention is that if introduced the no-fault system will not be retrospective. However, consideration will need to be given to when and how we could transfer to a new system and how outstanding claims could be handled if/when a no-fault system was introduced. What are your views on how outstanding claims might be handled?

The system needs to be prospective with outstanding claims completed under the process in which they were started.

7. The Review Group did not favour the use of a tariff system for compensation, as it felt that this would not address individual needs and it was unlikely that people would buy into a system where compensation was based on a tariff. The group therefore offered:

Recommendation 5 - that any compensation awarded should be based on need rather than on a tariff based system;

Question 9: Do you support the approach in Recommendation 5?

Yes ☑ No ☐

If not, why not? - N/A
9.1 What are your views on the assumption that the level of payments will be similar to those settled under the current system?

The payments should be based on the level of current payments, as these reflect need.

8. The Review Group was satisfied that a no-fault scheme established as they describe would be fully compatible with the requirements of the European Convention of Human Rights, based in particular on the need – as in Sweden and New Zealand – to build in appropriate appeals mechanisms, with an ultimate right to appeal to the courts on a point of fact or law. In addition, retention of the right to litigate will ensure that those for whom the no-fault system is felt to be inappropriate will still be able to raise claims using this route. The group recommended:

Recommendation 6 - that claimants who fail under the no-fault scheme should retain the right to litigate, based on an improved litigation system

Recommendation 7 - that a claimant who fails in litigation should have a residual right to claim under the no-fault scheme

Recommendation 8 - that, should a claimant be successful under the no-fault scheme, any financial award made should be deducted from any award subsequently made as a result of litigation

Recommendation 9 - that appeal from the adjudication of the no-fault scheme should be available to a court of law on a point of law or fact.

Question 10: Do you support recommendations 6 – 9 as proposed by the Review Group?

Yes ☑ No ☐

If no, why not? - N/A

10.1 Do you have any concerns that the Review Group’s recommendations may not be fully compatible with the European Convention of Human Rights?

Yes ☐ No ☑

If yes, what are your concerns? - N/A
9. The Review Group offered suggestions for improvement to the existing system and these are reproduced in Annex B. The group recommended:

   Recommendation 10 - that consideration should be given to our analysis of the problems in the current system, so that those who decide to litigate can benefit from them.

10. It is proposed that the suggested improvements will be taken forward as part of the forthcoming consultation on the Courts Reform Bill later this year by the Scottish Government Justice Directorate. In particular the Scottish Civil Courts Review\(^ {21}\) recommended that pre-action protocols should be made compulsory and it is considered that this would assist in resolving many of the areas identified by the Review Group. In addition, Sheriff Principle Taylor’s Review of Expenses and Funding of Civil Litigation in Scotland\(^ {22}\), which is due to report at the end the year will consider a range of issues.

11.1 Do you have any comments on the proposed action in relation to these suggestions?

11. The Review Group also considered whether or not the establishment of a scheme specific to neurologically impaired infants should be created (in the event that a general no-fault scheme is not introduced). Members considered that this group of patients arguably represents a special case and certainly accounts for the most significant sums awarded in compensation and legal costs. The Group were of the view that this was worthy of consideration.

12.1 What are your views on the Review Group’s suggestion that the future care component of any compensation in such cases could be provided in the form of a guarantee of delivery of services (both medical and social care) to meet the needs of the child, instead of by way of a monetary sum?

We would agree with this proposal.

General Comments

We would welcome any further general comments you may wish to offer here.

1. There is a very definite risk that the introduction of a no-fault compensation scheme will shift the culture in Scotland to expect compensation for mistakes. In England circa £1 billion is paid out in compensation currently; in Scotland the figure is closer to £30 million. It is extremely likely that this approach will increase the future cost of claims to the health service in Scotland.

2. It would be useful to be more specific about how this scheme would connect to both Boards' complaints processes and the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman

3. Consideration needs to be given to the impact of the integration of health and social care on the recommendations.

We are grateful for your response. Thank you.
