HOUSING TO 2040

A VISION FOR OUR FUTURE HOMES AND COMMUNITIES
WHAT IS HOUSING TO 2040?

HOUSING HAS a vital role to play in meeting many of our ambitions for Scotland, including eradicating child poverty and homelessness, ending fuel poverty, tackling the effects of climate change and promoting inclusive growth. We want everyone in Scotland to have a home that is warm, affordable and accessible.

We are asking you to help us plan together how our homes and communities should look and feel in 2040, taking account of the range and variety of places across Scotland, from urban to rural to island. Recent funding for affordable housing has been at record levels and it is more important than ever to make the best use of every pound we spend.

We have already engaged with councils, businesses, charities, home owners, tenants and many others. We asked them to consider some challenges which mean we need to do things differently in the future (page 3). Their comments have helped us write a vision for 2040 (pages 4-5); this is how we hope people will talk about their homes and communities in 2040. We have also developed 15 principles (pages 6-7); these are meant to be a high-level guide to how to make decisions to bring the vision to life.

This leaflet sets out a short version of the vision and principles for discussion. You can find the full length version at: www.gov.scot/publications/housing-to-2040.

In spring 2020, we will publish our final vision for Housing to 2040, and a route map showing how we will get there. We want this to be a vision shared by people the length and breadth of Scotland. Then we can make the long-term plans that give people and organisations across Scotland the certainty they have asked for.

Please do get involved (see back cover).

SOME CHALLENGES

WE HAVE an ageing population and people are living longer
This means that demands on health and social care will increase in the future. We want to think about our different housing options and promote greater adaptability to allow us to live independently at home for longer, reducing that demand.

THE NUMBER of households is growing and more people are living alone
The number of households in Scotland is projected to increase and one-person households are set to become the most common household type. This means we need to think strategically about how we design and build new homes and where, and how we can make the best use of our existing stock.

WE NEED to mitigate the impact of climate change
We must ensure our homes are energy efficient and are able to adapt to the effects of climate change. We’ve set out the actions we’ll take to reduce emissions from our homes in our Climate Change Plan and our Energy Efficient Scotland route map. We have also introduced a Climate Change Bill to strengthen our greenhouse gas emission reduction targets.

WE MUST act on homelessness
Nobody should be without a safe, warm place they can call home – that is why we are working hard to prevent homelessness in Scotland. We have published our Ending Homelessness and Rough Sleeping action plan to transform temporary accommodation and put an end to rough sleeping and homelessness.

WE WANT to tackle child poverty
The Scottish Government is committed to ending child poverty and the housing system can help us to do this. We want to increase housing affordability and lower running costs to reduce poverty for households with children.

WE NEED to manage the impact of Brexit and the UK Government’s welfare reforms
Brexit will have consequences for both housing supply and demand. The UK Government’s welfare reforms have reduced the support it provides – the Scottish Government works to mitigate this, but this isn’t sustainable in the long term.
Our Vision

Find the right home

- I can quickly find a home that is right for me when I need one. I have a choice about where in Scotland I live and the type of home I live in.
- My council, and developers listen to me and my community. They pay attention to what we want. We have the right infrastructure in place and are well-connected.
- I know where to go to get information and advice about my rights to housing. I know where to get the help I need to prevent me from losing my home.
- When I build my own home, I found it easy to access advice and support. This means I have a home which is just right for me.
- I have a home which is just right for me.
- I built my own home, I found it easy to access advice and support. This means I have a home which is just right for me.
- I can't tell by looking at my home whether I own or rent my home; it's in a great place and meets all of my needs.
- You can't tell by looking at my home whether I own or rent my home; it's in a great place and meets all of my needs.
- My local council and developers listen to me and my community. They pay attention to what we want. We have the right infrastructure in place and we are well-connected.

A WELL-FUNCTIONING HOUSING SYSTEM

PRINCIPLE 1
The housing system should supply high-quality affordable homes for living in, to shift the balance away from the use of homes as a means to store wealth.

PRINCIPLE 2
Government policy (including taxes and subsidies, for example) should promote house price stability, to help underpin Scotland's standard of living and productivity and promote a Fairer Scotland.

PRINCIPLE 3
Everybody should be able to save for the future (as well as be secure in their home and make significant changes to it) whether they rent or own.

PRINCIPLE 4
Housing provision should be informed by whole life economic costs and benefits in the round and help to address inequalities in health, wealth and education.

PRINCIPLE 5
Tenure-neutral space and quality standards for new homes (and existing homes where possible) should be set specifically to improve and protect quality of living and of place.

PRINCIPLE 6
Government policy should promote a greater diversity of home builders and broader availability of land for development to reduce prices and improve building quality.

PRINCIPLE 7
All tenures should apply the same high quality and safety standards and levels of consumer protection.

PRINCIPLE 8
New homes for sale should be built to high standards, defects should be identified and remedied quickly and all owners should be required to maintain the condition of their home.

PRINCIPLE 9
Decisions around the quality, location and utilisation of existing stock and new build should be ambitious in enhancing biodiversity, promoting Scotland's energy security, and be consistent with the target for Scotland's emissions to be net zero carbon by 2045.

PRINCIPLE 10
New housing, and the required community resources, should only be provided where they help to create safer, stronger, attractive, sustainable and integrated communities.

PRINCIPLE 11
Local communities should be empowered to respond to housing need in their area, as part of a coherent regional economic approach (creating and maintaining jobs) and supported by provision of the right infrastructure.

PRINCIPLE 12
Government intervention should help existing and new communities to be physically, digitally, culturally and economically connected within a coherent geographic region; this includes retaining and attracting vibrant communities in areas facing depopulation.

PRINCIPLE 13
Government should ensure that there are affordable housing options across Scotland for households at all income levels.

PRINCIPLE 14
Housing and the housing market should be highly flexible to enable people to meet their changing needs.

PRINCIPLE 15
Everyone has a right to an adequate home.*

* United Nations human rights treaties state that everybody has the right to an adequate standard of living for themselves and their families, including adequate food, clothing and housing.

You'll find more information describing what each of these principles might mean in practice in the full-length version available at: www.gov.scot/publications/housing-to-2040
WE WANT you to talk about your thoughts and ideas about how you think our homes and communities should look and feel like in 2040.

• What are the housing issues that matter to you and your community the most?
• Are these reflected in the vision and principles?
• How would you like our homes and communities to look and feel in 2040? What’s different? What’s the same?

There will be a formal public consultation in the autumn on the vision and principles, together with the policy choices and options for practical steps to go into the route map. This will provide a range of opportunities for you to give us your detailed views.

What you can do now:
• Discuss this with friends and family, in your communities, workplace or on Twitter using the hashtag #housing2040
• Email us your thoughts at Housing2040@gov.scot (please note we won’t be able to respond to each email individually)
