

Certain medicines may affect your ability to drive

From 21 October 2019 there will be a new drug driving law in Scotland.

If you are taking your medicine as directed and your driving is not impaired, then you are not breaking the law.

It will remain an offence to drive while your ability is impaired by drugs and, if in doubt, you should not drive.

It will also be an offence if you are over the limit for a drug which you are taking if you have not followed advice from your healthcare professional.

If you are worried a medicine you are taking may affect your ability to drive, talk to your healthcare professional so you are clear what advice you should follow.

www.mygov.scot/prescription-drugs-driving-scotland

#DRIVESMART

Safer Scotland
Scottish
Government