Reason
The road markings and signs at Junction 5 northbound on the M74 are really unclear. I travel this way most weekday mornings and, more often than not, I witness near collisions between vehicles due to the fact that many drivers seem confused at the unclear layout. Eg the middle lane road appears to lead to East Kilbride, Hamilton or back on to the M74 northbound. Right hand lane is for Bellshill according to the road markings. However, many cars heading for Bellshill go down the middle lane of the slip road to beat any traffic queues, then slip into the correct lane expecting other vehicles to give way.
Litter
I hit a massive pot hole between the Motherwell and Hamilton slip junctions on the m74 last week which the sequence of the traffic lights at Raith is out.
huge pothole around 6 feet long and 1/2 a foot wide, there is also a major pothole between lanes 1 and 2 further along this section section. This is seriously dangerous and so much so has actually causes alloy wheel damage to my vehicle.
2 lanes and is dangerous. To have a major motorway in such a state is unbelievable and in my opinion requires immediate attention before a serious accident takes place.
When or if pot holes will be fixed between Hamilton and Raith interchange the only lane without pot holes is with some obvious damage present on the southbound section, but really - a hideous amount of very lengthy deep troughs and huge holes on the northbound section. I had been assuming that it must be due for complete resurfacing at an opportune time but - apparently not.
6 meets the main motorway, on the inside lane and middle lanes all the way to the on ramp location NORTH BOUND junction 5 . There are too many individual defects to mention , but there are multiple between those two points and easily identifiable if your response vehicle checks this area .
There are several areas on the route that I travel on a daily basis which are currently suffering from large potholes and rough road surfaces. These are mainly located on the M74 between junction 2A to 3A heading from Glasgow Eastwards and on the M73 Northbound from between the Baillieston junction and junction 2A Gartcosh. I am also concerned by the change in speed limit (70 to 50mph) where the M74 joins the M73 North.I
I would like to bring to your attention that the state of the road at junction 6 hamilton/motherwell heading north there is at least 3 or 4 huge pot holes in which my car keeps getting dented at the wheel it is not safe when the speed limit is motorway could you please forward this to the appropriate authorities.
disgrace. Large pot holes that start just after the motherwell slip road on ramp heading north till you pass Raith . severe pot hole just as you enter M74 between inside + middle lanes
