Subject: Disability Assistance Consultation Timeline

(redacted),

In relation to the upcoming Disability Assistance Consultation, please see below the timescales requested APS, the contractor who provide the publishing services for SG, (redacted)

- They'll need a completed draft on 18th February – we may be able to push back on this a bit to the end of w/c 18th
- They need final amendments by the morning of 27th February
- For an Easy-Read version, they suggest allowing 20 working days for longer, more complex documents. Given past experience of commissioning Easy-Read, a number of iterations are required after officials review so we anticipate that this will not be ready until after the consultation launches.

- We're awaiting timescales on a Braille and Audio version of the consultation

Happy to discuss how this timeline aligns with the submission of the consultation document to the Cabinet Secretary.

Kind regards,

Ann McVie to clear drafts of the Comms Plan for the Cabinet Secretary for Social Security and Older People to note.

Background

The Scottish Parliament unanimously voted to pass the Social Security (Scotland) Bill on 25 April 2018, establishing the legislative framework for the delivery of devolved benefits and allowing the Scottish Government to create a new system of social security. The resulting Act, the Social Security Act (Scotland) 2018, received Royal Assent on 1 June 2018. This consultation will take views on our approach to the delivery of Disability Assistance in Scotland, covering assistance for children, people of working age and older people.

Communications and engagement objectives

Primary

- Build a Disability Assistance system that is co-design with people who receive benefits and meets their needs.
- Raise awareness of Disability Assistance consultation with stakeholders and clients.
- Increase response rates to the consultation.
- Assist those with written communication barriers to engage with the consultation.
- Promote the improvements the Scottish Government have already made or are committed to.
- Create awareness of entitlement to Disability Assistance with clients.
- Communicate our approach to case transfer.
- Proactively provide information directly to stakeholders and clients to minimise the volume of enquires directed to Social Security Scotland and Scottish Government
- Demonstrate a transparent approach to policy development by seeking input from key stakeholders and clients.
- Flush out any issues where there is likely to be a significant push for change, allowing these to be considered in advance of developing the regulations.
- Ensure that stakeholders and individuals feel involved in the way in which policy is delivered and deliver communications to gain their support before we draft regulations.

- Seek stakeholder buy-in to support consultation events and help build capacity with individuals to respond.

Secondary

- Promote uptake of Disability Assistance.
 - Manage expectations of those who feel that they should be entitled to Disability Assistance but may not be.
 - Ensure that we capitalise on stakeholder channels to secure maximum reach and engagement about professional stakeholders.
 - Highlight the contribution of Disability Assistance to the Healthier, Wealthier and Fairer Strategic Objectives, and its contribution to the following National Outcomes:
 - We respect, protect and fulfil human rights and live free from discrimination;
 - We tackle poverty by sharing opportunities, wealth, and power more equally;
 - We live in communities that are inclusive, empowered, resilient and safe;
 - We grow up loved, safe and respected so that we realise our full potential.
- Audiences

Wave 2

Key lines for this form part of the Wave 2 Communications plan

Age

Due to the very broad age demographic of the target audience they will engage with different channels. We know that previous online engagement has resulted in very little input from older people. This is addressed in the actions below.

Trans and BME

(redacted)

It is important that our communication and consultation specifically targets these groups. This is addressed in the actions below.

Accessibility

Disabled people have a higher level of accessibility barrier proportionate to the general population.

(redacted)

Wider public

We would hope that the consultation will be positively received.

Terminal Illness

Disability Assistance Names

To remain consistent with the terminology used within the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018 we have proposed that all three types of assistance are described as Disability Assistance for the relevant associated client group. We have asked for respondents views on the proposed names and expect a high volume of responses, particularly on Disability Assistance for Older People, who we know from our user research do not consider themselves to be either “disabled” or “older” in many cases.

Commencement

We have stated that legal responsibility for all forms of Disability Assistance will be assumed by the Scottish Government from April 2020.

General lines

- This consultation is an opportunity for disabled people and those who represent them to provide feedback on the detail of Disability Assistance and how we intend to deliver it in Scotland.
- The actions that the Scottish Government has already undertaken or committed to will help to ensure that people who are entitled to Disability Assistance get financial support. [More detail at Annex A]
- We want to ensure that there is real trust placed in our social security system in Scotland. Upholding our values of treating people with dignity, fairness and respect is key to gaining that trust.
- We hope that the actions that we have already undertaken or committed to will gain the trust of disabled people and show that we do intend to uphold our values within the Scottish system.

- We are delivering three forms of Disability Assistance which are based around the criterion of age entitlement for people with longer term disabilities or conditions which have an impact on their day-to-day life.
- We will protect Disability Assistance ensuring that it continues to be non-means tested. Reflecting the results of our previous consultation and engagement with stakeholders, we have already identified a number of areas that can be redesigned so that they better meet the needs of individuals. We will co-design these, and the end to end process from application to award, with people with experience of the current system.
- Making significant changes to the benefit rules and structures will mean longer delivery timescales. We want to avoid delays because people have told us that they would like the Scottish Government to take responsibility for these benefits as soon as possible.
- We have bold aspirations for the medium and longer term. For example, we want to ensure that Disability Assistance works as effectively as possible with other devolved services such as health, social care and housing, and to continue to explore the potential for a Disability Assistance that is responsive to people's needs at different stages of their lives.
- We know that the level of fraud in the current system is small and expect that to continue. We must not create barriers to people receiving assistance they are entitled to, for fear of a small minority of people carrying out fraudulent activity. Instead we will create an accessible and inclusive system which deals appropriately with fraudulent activity if and when it does occur.
- The rules on Terminal Illness are laid out in the Social Security (Scotland) Act 2018 - that is why we are not consulting specifically on this area. Guidance produced by the Chief Medical Officer will be published on the Scottish Government and Social Security Scotland websites ahead of the launch of Disability Assistance and will be accompanied by a Plain English summary, aimed at practitioners and clients.

ANNEX B

Some of the changes we have committed to already are outlined in the table below:

You said:

We listened:

Assessments

- The private sector should not be paid to undertake assessments to assess entitlement to Disability benefits.
- People are given little choice about how and when their assessment takes place. They have had to travel for hours to get to assessments, those who are too ill to leave the house have been refused home assessments
- There are too many unnecessary assessments - even when it is clear that a condition or disability will not improve.
- There is no clear guidance on the role of companions.
- People are expected to gather their own supporting evidence, often at a cost to them. It is not clear what evidence people should provide to support their claim.
- Assessors are not given enough time to consider evidence before an assessment begins.
- Assessment reports are often inaccurate and do not reflect what happens at assessment.
- Recordings should be available for audit purposes

- The private sector will not undertake assessments. Social Security Scotland will deliver assessments to determine eligibility for Disability Assistance, fully supported by public sector health and social care professionals.
- We want to ensure that people with disabilities can access a flexible, person centred assessment service across the length and breadth of the country.
- People will be offered a choice of an appointment date and time that suits them, home visits will be available when they are required.
- We are committed to significantly reducing face-to-face assessments. This will only happen when it is the only practicable way to gather additional information to make a decision about entitlement.
- People will have the right to be accompanied to an assessment, and to have that person participate in the assessment. This right is included in the Social Security (Scotland) Act.
- The Agency will be pro-active in collecting evidence and provide clear guidance on what evidence will support a claim, being open and transparent about what information is necessary.
- By reducing the number of face-to-face assessments being undertaken, we will reduce time constraints on assessors, allowing them more time to fully consider the evidence provided.
- As part of our commitment to trust and transparency, audio recording of assessments will be provided as standard.
- The appeal tribunal will be given the recording and they may choose to use it to inform their determination.

After an assessment

- A copy of the assessor's report is not sent alongside the initial decision.
- People are not informed about whether/how each piece of evidence has been used
- Social Security Scotland will send a copy of the assessment report alongside the decision letter.
- The decision letter will explain how the decision has been reached, and what evidence has been used in doing so.

Application

- The application process is not accessible.
- Guidance on filling in application forms and preparing for assessments is not available in accessible formats
- It is not made clear that information from previous assessments will not be re-used
- Employment should not disadvantage a person's entitlement.
- We will ensure that the application process for Disability Assistance is inclusive, accessible, provided in a range of formats, can be completed in a range of routes (online, phone, post) and is simple, transparent and works for those making claims to Social Security Scotland.
- A review is on-going of current content and communication products, and we will ensure that all information is accessible.
- We are exploring the range of health and social care evidence which could be used to support decision making. We will use information held by the Agency when undertaking a review.

- Disability Assistance will not be means-tested and in line with this a person's employment status will have no influence in relation to their entitlement.
Young People 16-18
- Young people are expected to transfer to PIP when they are approaching 16. This is at an age where young people may undergo a number of transitions into adult services, which can cause anxiety.
- We will automatically extend awards of Disability Living Allowance and Disability Assistance for Children and Young People to age 18, to ensure that they don't have to apply for a new working age benefit at a time when they are transitioning between children and adult services in other areas of their lives.

Terminal Illness

- The current definition for accessing disability benefits is too restrictive, resulting in some people not getting access to the right support, when they need it most.
- We will provide a new definition of terminal illness so that medical practitioners can use their clinical judgement to decide when an individual is regarded as terminally ill and eligible for Disability Assistance under special rules. Under special rules, an individual's application will be fast-tracked, and they will be entitled to the highest level of the award component(s) to which they are entitled.
Advocacy Services

Concern that Advocacy support is not sufficient to assist people with disabilities to engage sufficiently when applying or being assessed for disability benefit eligibility.

- People will have a right to independent advocacy, if owing to a disability they require the help of an advocate to engage effectively with the Scottish social security system.
- We are developing 'advocacy service standards'. We are working closely with advocacy organisations to ensure that those organisations delivering advocacy services are delivering their services in line with these standards.
Accessible Communication

The current system is inaccessible for some people with a disability.

- Inclusive communication will be considered in all that we do.
- To ensure that this happens, the requirement in the Act has also been reflected in the Social Security Charter.
- We are developing communication channels which will allow for a more inclusive, personalised and efficient process that meets the expectations of applicants
