

Schools could lose religious vetting

SCOTTISH Catholic schools could lose the right to vet teaching staff for their religious suitability.

The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) has told the Scottish Government to look again at legislation on so-called Catholic approval. It also said it would provide support in the event of any discrimination cases being brought by teachers.

Full story: Page 4

