Hi

The team have dug a bit deeper - they will send a summary later today

My understanding is we think the source for FMEL was Houlder - there is a ladies name - Redacted - who is still a Houlder employee - on docs

We think calmac produce the 425 page SoR; CMAL reduce it to ~300 pages including other requirements from bidders and this reduced document goes out to all bidders with the ITT.

My team here think having the original 425page doc could be a disadvantage (!) in that FMEL had more info than was being requested by CMAL and thus risked bidding/pricing stuff that CMAL didn't require.

There is another design house mentioned - OSD-IMT - the docs, not sure whether that's part of calmac using others to develop their SoR??

Additional comment from Hugh. There is nothing in the Calmac operational specification that is not in the CMAL Technical Specification that all potential shipyards received.
