Subject: RE: FM commission - request for information

CS's office asked for one but it hasn't been done yet. [redacted] are at SPS today speaking to [redacted]. I suggest that whatever we put up to FM is copied to CS and that we confirm with PO that this meets the ask.

Thanks [redacted] for laying this out, really helpful. We are updating Prions FMQs as well.

I haven't seen the Note for Mr. Brown then went up last night, grateful if anyone can please share the note.

Many thanks,

Subject: RE: FM commission - request for information

I realise there's a number of different asks on this issue and I think prisons are leading on the following but my team will of course feed in in any way helpful:

- Note for Keith Brown commissioned last night (can this be copied to Ms Robison)
- Note for FM before 2pm interview (could be combined with above?)
- Urgent Question if accepted by PO ([redacted] in my team will coordinate with [redacted] team on this)

There's also updates needed to respective FMQs needed. I'm working on ours.

Personally, I don't see a reason why FM could not talk to any of that. Mostly it refers to general policy.

“Decisions taken by the Scottish Prison Service (SPS) on the placement of transgender prisoners is based on protecting both the wellbeing and rights of the individual and those around them, including staff. The SPS use comprehensive individualised risk assessments to inform decisions such as the appropriate location of transgender people in custody and not the basis of a Gender Recognition Certificate.

May be helpful to print this out – separately , it is in the briefing but this is a helpful summary for Cab Sec:

As at September 2022

At that point, we had 15 trans individuals, including 11 trans women and 4 trans men.

Of the 11 trans women, six are in male, five in female estate. Of the four trans men, three are in the women's estate, and one in the male.

They were all living in single cells at that point

Subject: RE: Urgent Question - Scottish Prison Service

[REDACTED under Section 30(b)(ii) – Free and frank exchange of views]

The Gender Recognition Reform (Scotland) Bill does not change the SPS approach to trans prisoners.

Decisions taken by the SPS on the placement of transgender prisoners is based on protecting both the wellbeing and rights of the individual and those around them, including staff. The SPS use comprehensive individualised risk assessments to inform decisions such as the appropriate location of transgender people in custody and not the basis of a Gender Recognition Certificate - unlike the case in England.

SPS will retain the ability to place an individual in an estate which does not necessarily correspond to the gender on their Gender Recognition Certificate where they determine that to do so could put the individual or others at risk.

The current GRC process does not prevent applications from offenders or have any scope to refuse applications on the basis of risk. The Scottish Parliament agreed changes to the Bill that introduced new safeguards around offenders, which go further than what is currently in place. That has been blocked by the UK Government's Section 35 intervention.

You will already have this, but if not, suggested revised reply below:

[redacted]

Russell Findlay: To ask the Scottish Government whether it will provide an update on the Scottish Prison Service's Gender Identity and Gender Reassignment Policy Review

Keith Brown:

I have asked Teresa Medhurst, Chief Executive of the Scottish Prison Service (SPS), to update on the progress of the review. She has confirmed that: The SPS's Gender Identity Policy review is being conducted in five stages. The 'policy initiation' stage and 'evidence and engagement' stages have `now been completed and the policy review is now moving through the 'analysis and recommendations' and 'authorise and publish' stages.

SPS anticipate the updated policy being published in the coming months. Following implementation, the policy will be subject to on-going monitoring and evaluations.

All

So that you are sighted on what appears to be the final material sent up. Sorry trying to collate it all and make sense of the million different chains. I am now going through all the chains to check and will ensure any additional stuff is copied to you.

I am aware of the need to ensure you are all sighted – please bear with us. Half of the requests this morning did not come in on mail – [redacted as Free and frank exchange of views]. I am sorry if I am short – but please be reassured I only know too well the need to sight everyone.

[redacted]- we have not been sighted [redacted]– all that I produced was copied under separate chain and was restricted to factual information that you had previously provided.

If I see anything I will advise. However I understand it was to be [redacted]. The only request that came in on this was from SGLD that you were sighted on so the only other requests [redacted] so you are I think now sighted on all that we are here in prisons policy team.

Hope that assists meantime

Subject: Read out of Cab Sec BBC interview on trans prisoners

Dear Colleagues,

Please find below an overview of Mr Brown's interview with the BBC earlier today – on trans prisoners.

Below is a read-out of Mr Brown's responses. The BBC were asking about:

- How confident SG were in SPS's approach to managing risks
- What was being done to protect vulnerable prisoners, especially women
- How the GRR Bill impacted on decisions made
- SG response to public concerns on this issue

Hope this is of some help

Many thanks

[redacted]

Readout of KB interview on trans prisoner [redacted]

I am very confident that the Scottish Prison Service is managing the risks, sometimes extreme risks, posed by those in custody - both to themselves and others around them.

Risk assessments are done over a period of time, and decisions are made from this

Decisions on where to place prisoners have nothing to do with the GRR Bill that went through Parliament. The Prison service takes the facts as they see them, take the risks that are presented and mitigate against them.

As things currently stand SPS don't know if people have a gender recognition certificate or not. There are medical assessments done, health assessments, psychological assessments - these are what are taken into account. Gender recognition certificates are not a cornerstone of the assessments carried out by SPS.

SPS knows better than anyone else, the background of prisoners, the trauma they have suffered and the possibilities of exacerbating this. They take these issues into account when deciding where to allocate prisoners.

Part of the justice system across the board is managing risks and I am confident that we do the proper risks assessments to minimise risks for everyone

Have to understand the general public concern about this, not least the ways facts are presented by the media, and that SG have a duty to respond to this. Hope they will accept that we do take these things very seriously and have a strong- track record of keeping people safe.

A Scottish Government spokesperson said: “Decisions taken by the Scottish Prison Service (SPS) on the placement of transgender prisoners are based on protecting both the wellbeing and rights of the individual and those around them, including staff.

“The SPS use comprehensive individualised risk assessments to inform decisions, such as the appropriate location of transgender people in custody, and not the basis of a Gender Recognition Certificate. The Gender Recognition Reform (Scotland) Bill does not change this process in any way.”

Subject: CAB SEC CLEARANCE PLEASE: GRC lets trans women into English jails

Private Office

The Times has approached for clarification to a point made by the Cab Sec in Parliament about the requirement for a GRC in prisons in England and Wales.

Grateful for your consideration of the following response which has been agreed with policy colleagues and SPADS.

A Scottish Government spokesperson said:

“In Scotland decisions on placement and management are based on multiple factors and a through individualised risk assessment.

“The policy in England and Wales is distinct from Scotland’s and makes specific provision in respect of those prisoners with GRCs. It is for the UK Government to confirm how this operates.”

Thanks [redacted]

QUERY

Keith Brown seemed to suggest Scotland's vetting was more rigorous than England. He claimed access to prisons in England and Wales is "determined by the presence of GRC" whereas in Scotland a GRC has "minimal impact" on a placement.

It seems to imply a GRC is a golden ticket to a women's jail in England but there is a comment from Downing Street on PA which suggests the process in England is similar to Scotland.

Transcript of exactly what KB said: "...They do not, as is the case in England and Wales, have their process determined by the presence of a GRC."

“Such decisions seek to protect both the wellbeing and rights of the individual as well as the welfare and rights of others around them, including staff, in order to achieve an outcome that balances risks and promotes the safety of all.

“Where there are any concerns about any risks posed by an individual, either to themselves or others, we retain the ability to keep them separate from the mainstream population until an agreed management plan is in place.”

Subject: FOR AWARENESS Media query - Sunday Times - Calum Steele comments

Cab Sec, PO

Good afternoon

For awareness we've been approached by The Sunday Times to comment on remarks made by Calum Steele about the transgender case.

After consideration policy, comms and spads agreed to send on our current lines as below.

A Scottish Government spokesperson said:

“The placement of prisoners is an operational matter for the Scottish Prison Service (SPS) who use comprehensive individualised risk assessments to inform decisions, such as the appropriate location of transgender people in custody.

“SPS is working with partners including the Scottish Government on the review of their policy on managing transgender prisoners and that process is nearing completion.”

Query

Hi,

Could you get me a response to these comments by Calum Steele regarding [redacted] ?

Best regards,

[redacted]

Following the conviction of Bryson, I asked if (s)he was a Trans-woman or simply a man pretending to be so? Whichever is true – Bryson’s case has finally shot that most resilient of foxes - that opponent’s concerns for women’s safety were due to simple transphobia.

Criminals, especially those who connive and exploit as part of their offending behaviour are hardly renowned for their honesty and integrity. On the contrary, they are known for their wickedness and willingness to use any and all means for their own selfish and malevolent ends. A highly improbable risk of a fraud investigation is not the safeguard weak politicians suggest it is, and the sooner they accept it, the sooner they can work on restoring some form of credibility with a highly sceptical public.

The madness of incoherent policy positioning has always been there for those of us prepared to look but it now has nowhere to hide.

We are to believe a sixteen-year-old is mentally mature enough to make life changing decisions, whilst simultaneously accepting the brain does not fully mature to age 25 if you are in the criminal justice system. We are to believe we have a victim centred criminal justice system whilst ignoring the trauma inflicted on victims of sex crimes having to refer to their “penis owning” attackers as she or her. We are to believe the Scottish Prison Service can keep women prisoners safe if housed with trans women (with penises), yet can’t don’t the same for female penis owning prisoners in the male estate.

Dear Cab Sec and Po,

Grateful for your consideration of the following response to a query from the Daily Mail about [redacted]

The following has been agreed with SG and SPS policy colleagues and Spads.

Many thanks

[redacted]

Issue

a former senior prison source has told us that for several years the prison service were warning the government about the 'inevitable' prospect of a case like [redacted] – the transgender double rapist – but because it was seen as a headache and politically sensitive issue nothing was done to prevent it. Is this something you would comment on?

Suggested comment

A Scottish Government spokesperson said: "The SPS uses comprehensive individualised risk assessments to inform decisions, such as the appropriate location of transgender people in custody, and it is clear from the steps being taken that procedures to deal with a scenario such as this have been put in place."
