Hi <REDACTED>

I've got some lines on this that may come in useful:

'A SAIC-funded study is in its final stages of evaluating the impacts of new-generation thermal delicing technology on fish health and welfare. Upon completion, a case study covering project findings will be made available. This is expected within the first half of 2024.'

Hope that helps.

Best,

We have a media enquiry in with a short turn around about the use of thermolicers in scotland. I'd like to make reference to the saic study.

Is it correct to say that the study is considering the impacts of new generation thermolicers in aspects of fish health and welfare and that the outcome will be published in early 2024?
